A NEW HOME FOR GREENVALE EQUESTRIAN CLUBS

Several equestrian establishments are set to benefit from use of a new pavilion at Greenvale Equestrian Centre thanks to the Andrews Labor Government.

Minister for Community Sport Ros Spence today joined Hume City representatives to officially launch the game-changing facilities backed by a $200,000 grant.

The pavilion includes new change rooms for women and men, a multi-purpose room, a renovated kitchen, kiosk and bar area, and a new verandah.

Greenvale is home to several equestrian clubs including the Bulla Adult Riding Club, the Tullamarine Riding Club, the Oakland Horse and Driving Club and the Goulburn Valley Horse Trials Association.

It is also home to non-equestrian clubs such as the Greenvale Sport and Game Fishing Club which caters for all types of fishing in a family friendly environment.

The new venue provides a perfect base for local clubs, officials and riders to showcase equestrian at its best as well as provide the local equestrian community with the chance to stage future state and national events.

The new community facilities also provide space for meetings and local celebrations.

The Labor Government has invested more than $1.1 billion in community sport and recreation infrastructure since 2014, including a recent $55 million Budget boost towards sports infrastructure to deliver new and improved community sports infrastructure across the state.

From playground redevelopments to pavilion upgrades, investments like these are all about creating jobs, stimulating local economies and fast-tracking community recovery by improving the health and wellbeing of Victorians.
